Dear valued reader,

As a subscriber to Daily Business Review, you are a very important member of Law.com's community. We appreciate your loyalty and trust in our expert journalism and editorial content, and we remain steadfastly committed toward supporting the legal community across regional, national and global perspectives.

In evolving with both global trends toward paperless solutions across all media and industries and in shifting with the preferences of our readers, we have decided to wind down print production of Daily Business Review and have committed to shifting all of our content to our website.

We have already been investing toward our user experiences and features and will continue to meet our customers where they are, delivering the same trusted quality of content now in user-friendly formats that truly go beyond informing legal professionals. If you haven't already been using our online platform, you may be pleasantly surprised at all that is available to you.

Everything you received in print plus more can be found online, including DBR 100 and other special reports, business of law, coverage of state and federal trial and appellate court decisions, verdicts and settlements, Board of Contributors content, attorney recognitions, and more. Our team is here to provide you support with acclimating to our online experience and to show you the innovative tools and features available to you now.

The final print edition of Daily Business Review will be our December 29th issue. We appreciate your continued support and your being a part of this evolutionary moment in Daily Business Review's long history.

As always, I welcome the opportunity to chat with you and encourage you to reach out at dgialanella@alm.com.

Sincerely,

David L. Gialanella
